FREEMAN W. BURFORD resides in Texas City, Texas, and as of June 30, 1950 was Accounting Manager of this company. MOSLEY, HILL and PERRY are employees of Sid W. Richardson, according to T-1.

T-1 further advised on April 17, 1947 the refinery building of the Sid Richardson Refining Company was damaged by the Texas City Explosion and that a definite estimate of the damages sustained by the company's refinery was not obtained, but that it was learned that the damage was sufficiently protected by insurance; satisfactory settlement was made, and operation of the company resumed on May 15, 1947. This business is reportedly conducted as a branch with headquarters maintained in Fort Worth, Texas. T-1 stated that on June 22, 1950 it was learned that the Texas City Plant was dormant and was maintaining only a skeleton crew of about sixteen employees. According to T-1 the Texas City Plant of the Sid Richardson Refining Company occupies an estimated one hundred acres in an industrial area in Texas City.
